

STONEWALL JACKSON.

THE CONFEDERATE CHIEFTAIN'S
LAST COMMAND IN THE FIELD.

Mortally Wounded by Shots from His Own Men—Litter Brought Under Federal Artillery Fire—Last Order Given by the General.

When Jackson had reached the point where his line now crossed the turnpike, scarcely a mile west of Chancellorsville and not half a mile from a line of Federal troops, he had found his front line unfit for the further and vigorous advance he desired, by reason of the irregular character of the fighting, now right, now left, and because of the dense thickets through which it was impossible to preserve alignment. Division commanders found it more and more difficult as the twilight deepened to hold their broken brigades in hand.
Regretting the necessity of relieving the troops in front, Gen. Jackson had ordered A.
P. Hill's division, his third and reserve line, to be placed in front. While this change was being effected, impatient and anxious, the general rode forward on the turnpike, followed by two or three of his staff and a number of couriers and signal sergeants. He passed the swampy depression, and began the ascent of the hill toward Chancellorsville, when he came upon a line of the Federal infantry lying on their arms. Fired at by one or two muskets (two musket balls from the front), he turned and came back toward his line, upon the side of the road to his left.

SHOT BY HIS OWN MEN.

As he rode near to the Confederate troops just placed in position, and ignorant that he was in the front, the left company began firing to the front, and two of his party fell from their saddles dead—Capt. Howell, of the engineers, and Sergt. Cummins, of the signal corps. Spurring his horse across the road to his right, he was met a second volley from the right company of Pender's North Carolina brigade. Under this volley, when not two rods from the troops, the general received three balls at the same instant. One penetrated the palm of his right hand, and was cut out that night from the back of his hand.
A second passed around the wrist of the left arm and out through the left hand. But a third ball passed through the left arm half way from the shoulder to the elbow. The large bone of the upper arm was splintered to the elbow joint, and the wound bled freely.
His horse turned quickly from the fire, through the thick bushes, which swept the cap from the general's head and scratched his forehead, leaving drops of blood to stain his face.

As he lost his hold upon the bridle rein he reined from the saddle and was caught by the arms of Capt. Milbourne, of the signal corps.
Laid upon the ground, there came at once to his rescue Gen. A. P. Hill and members of his staff. The general reached his side a minute after, to find Gen. Hill holding the head and shoulders of the wounded chief.
Cutting open the coat sleeve, from wrist to shoulder, I found the wound in the upper arm, and with my handkerchief I bound the arm above the wound, to stem the flow of blood. Couriers were sent for Dr. Hunter McGuire, the surgeon of the corps and the general's trusted friend, and for an ambulance. Being outside of our lines, it was urgent that he should be moved at once.
With difficulty litter bearers were brought from the line near by, the general placed upon the litter and carefully raised to the shoulder, I myself bearing one corner.

UNDER ARTILLERY FIRE.

A moment later artillery from the Federal side was opened upon us; great broadsides thundered over the woods; hissing shells searched the dark thickets through, and shrapnel swept the road along which we moved. Two or three steps farther and the litter bearer at my side was struck and fell, but as the litter turned May Watkins, Lady of Hills staff, happily caught it. But the fright of the men was so great that we were obliged to lay the litter and its burden down upon the road. As the litter bearers ran to the cover of the trees I threw myself by the general's side, and held him firmly to the ground as he attempted to rise. Over us swept the rapid fire of shot and shell—grape-shot striking fire on the flinty rock of the road all around us and sweeping from their feet horses and men of the artillery just moved to the front. Soon the firing veered to the other side of the road, and I sprang to my feet, assisted the general to rise, passed my arm around him, and with the wounded man's weight thrown heavily upon me, we forsook the road.

Entering the woods, he sank to the ground from exhaustion, but the litter was soon brought, and, again rallying a few men, we endeavored to carry him farther, when a second bearer fell at my side. This time, with none to assist, the litter careened, and the general fell to the ground with a groan of deep pain.
Greatly alarmed, I sprang to his aid, and lifting his head as a stray beam of moonlight came through clouds and leaves, he opened his eyes and weakly said: "Never mind me, captain, never mind me." Raising him again to his feet, he was accosted by Brig. Gen.
Pender: "Oh, general, I hope you are not seriously wounded. I will have to retire my troops to reform them, they are so much broken by this fire." But Jackson, rallying his strength, with firm voice said: "You must hold your ground, Gen. Pender; you must hold your ground, sir!" And so uttered his last command on the field—Capt. James Power Smith in The Century.

Children Who Make Language.

The language-making instinct of very young children, which, in Mr. Horatio Hale's opinion, furnishes the solution for the puzzling question of the origin of tongues, is curiously shown among the children reared in Shaker families. They have, according to the evidence of those acquainted with the subject, many verbs and nouns, apparently of their own creation, and unlike any known dialect. The words are usually singularly ugly and unpleasant to any one with a sensitive ear.—Boston Transcript.

A Mutual Feeling.

Billings (meeting Baxter who is walking rapidly along the street)—Helloa Baxter, why this rush?
Baxter—I am walking fast to keep that felt low blazg from catching up with me. He's an awful bore. So long.
Billings (meeting Stagg, who is walking slowly)—Helloa, old fellow, why are you poking along this way?
Stagg—To keep from catching up with that fellow Baxter. He's the worst bore in town.
—Arkansas Traveler.

Profits of Moonshining.

Moonshiners say they can stay in jail six months in the year, still three, and loaf three and make more money thereby than at any other business. They get seventy-five cents to $1 a gallon for their whiskey and sell it as fast as they can make it. Very little is ever found when stills are seized.—Chicago Times.

The Cost of Fires.

Three hundred million dollars is a low estimate of the direct cost to the people of this country of fires that occur in a year.
